

Nature's most effective method of recycling?

In this lesson, urban farming consultant Jon Walsh taught Grade 4 students about one of Nature's many amazing cycles - composting - possibly Nature's most effective method of recycling.

Students not only all made mini compost bins and saw how kitchen, garden and other waste can be recycled into plant food, they also learnt easy ways to collect and recycle water around the house.

Jon describing the benefits of composting

Students learning the basics of creating a compost bin

↑
Action stations!
Students get their hands dirty cutting up organic material for their compost bins

For more information, Jon Walsh

Urban food production and training
Garden installation and maintenance.
E-mail: info@businessgrow.net